24 Mark A. Wolff, Wolff & Wolff, Elk Grove, CA, for plaintiffs.

25 Robert W. Norman, Jr., Neil J. Cooper, Houser LLP, Irvine, CA, 26 for defendants.27 CHRISTOPHER D. JAIME, Bankruptcy Judge: 28I.
Introduction29 A bankruptcy discharge operates as an injunction against the 30 collection of a discharged debt as a personal liability of the 31 32

1 debtor. See 11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(2).¹ A violation of the 2 discharge injunction is an act of civil contempt for which the 3 bankruptcy court may award compensatory damages as are necessary 4 or appropriate to enforce the discharge injunction or remedy its 5 violation. See 11 U.S.C. § 105(a).² This opinion holds that the 6 compensatory damages a bankruptcy court may award to enforce the 7 discharge injunction or remedy its violation-either directly or 8 under 11 U.S.C. § 524(i) which treats a violation of its terms as 9 a violation of the discharge injunction-do not include emotional 10 distress damages.³ Taggart v. Lorenzen, 139 S. Ct. 1795 (2019), 11

12 ¹Section 524(a)(2) states as follows

13 (a) A discharge in a case under this title- ... (2) 14 operates as an injunction against the commencement or 15 continuation of an action, the employment of process, 16 or an act, to collect, recover or offset any such debt as a personal liability of the debtor, whether or not discharge of such debt is waived[.]

17 11 U.S.C. § 524(a)(2).

18 ²Section 105(a) states as follows:

19 (a) The court may issue any order, process, or judgment 20 that is necessary or appropriate to carry out the 21 provisions of this title. No provision of this title 22 providing for the raising of an issue by a party in 23 interest shall be construed to preclude the court from, 24 sua sponte, taking any action or making any determination necessary or appropriate to enforce or implement court orders or rules, or to prevent an abuse of process.

25 11 U.S.C. § 105(a).

26 ³Section 524(i) states as follows:

27 The willful failure of a creditor to credit payments 28 received under a plan confirmed under this title, unless the order confirming the plan is revoked, the plan is in default, or the creditor has not received

1 in which the United States Supreme Court stated that the "old 2 soil" of injunction enforcement and the "traditional principles" 3 of civil contempt apply "straightforwardly" to the discharge 4 injunction compels this result.

5 The remainder of this opinion explains why a claim alleged 6 under § 524(i) fails as a matter of law and as implausible. And 7 the opinion explains why, without a § 524 claim, this court lacks 8 jurisdiction over remaining non-core state law claims under 28 9 U.S.C. § 1334 or, even if jurisdiction exists or is ever found to 10 exist, the court would abstain under 28 U.S.C. § 1334(c)(1).⁴

II. Background

Defendants Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., as Indenture Trustee
Under the Indenture Relating to the IMPAC CMB Trust Series 2005-6, and PHH Mortgage Corporation (collectively, payments required to be made under the plan in the manner required by the plan (including crediting the amounts required under the plan), shall constitute a violation of an injunction under subsection (a)(2) if the act of the creditor to collect and failure to credit payments in the manner required by the plan caused material injury to the debtor.

11 U.S.C. § 524 (i).

⁴Section 1334 (c) (1) states as follows:

(c) (1) Except with respect to a case under chapter 15 of title 11, nothing in this section prevents a district court in the interest of justice, or in the interest of comity with State courts or respect for State law, from abstaining from hearing a particular proceeding arising under title 11 or arising in or related to a case under title 11.

8 Ellen C. Valdellon (collectively, "Plaintiffs"). For the reasons 9 explained below, Defendants' motion will be granted. The § 13 be dismissed without prejudice.

14 A. The Loan and the Property

15 The subject of this adversary proceeding is a loan that Mr.
16 Valdellon obtained in 2005 secured by real property located in 17 Roseville, California.⁵ SAC ¶¶ 3, 9-13; Valdellon v. Wells Fargo 18 Bank, N.A., et al. (In re Valdellon), 2024 WL 404404, at *1 (E.D.
19 Cal. Feb. 2, 2024). Defendant PHH has been the servicer of the 20 loan since 2019. SAC ¶¶ 10, 39; Bankr. Docket 135. Defendant 21 Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., as Indenture Trustee, is the owner of the 22 loan. SAC ¶¶ 11-12.

23 B. Plaintiffs' Chapter 13 Bankruptcy Case and This 24 Adversary Proceeding

25
26 ⁵At the inception of this adversary proceeding, Plaintiffs 27 asserted that the property was their principal residence when 28 they filed their bankruptcy petition. Plaintiffs' New York state tax returns established that Plaintiffs were New York residents, and they claimed state tuition tax benefits based on New York residency, when they filed their petition. See Adv. Docket 48.

1 Plaintiffs were debtors in the parent chapter 13 case. They 2 filed a chapter 13 petition and an initial sixty-month chapter 13 3 plan on March 13, 2014. SAC ¶¶ 16, 18, 19; Bankr. Dockets 1, 7.
4 The first plan payment was due "not later than the 25th day of 5 each month beginning the month after the order for relief under 6 chapter 13." Bankr. Dockets 7 at § 1.01, 105 at § 2.01.
7

8 Plaintiffs filed a first amended plan on April 24, 2014.
9 SAC ¶ 20; Bankr. Dockets 31-36. The first amended plan was 10 confirmed on August 1, 2014. SAC ¶ 21; Bankr. Docket 49.

11 To adjust payments for certain tax debts, Plaintiffs filed a 12 first modified plan and a motion to confirm it on July 21, 2015.
13 SAC ¶ 24; Bankr. Dockets 61-66. The first modified plan was 14 confirmed on December 10, 2015. SAC ¶ 25; Bankr. Dkt. 68.

15 Plaintiffs defaulted on payments required by the first 16 modified plan because, on November 29, 2017, the chapter 13 17 trustee ("Trustee") filed a Notice of Default and Application to 18 Dismiss which stated as follows:

19 Debtor has failed to make all payments due under the 20 plan. As of November 28, 2017, payments are delinquent 21 in the amount of $4,574.00. In order to discharge this 22 Notice of Default, you must cure this delinquency AND 23 make all subsequent payments that are due within the next 30 days. Because your next payment of $2,798.00 will become due on December 25, 2017, the TOTAL amount you must pay by December 29, 2017 is $7,372.00.

24 Bankr. Docket 70 (emphasis in original).

25 The Trustee also filed a motion to dismiss Plaintiffs' 26 chapter 13 case on May 11, 2018. Bankr. Docket 92. Although 27 Plaintiffs opposed the Trustee's motion on June 4, 2018, they 28 nevertheless agreed with the Trustee and proposed to file a second modified plan before the motion to dismiss was heard.

1 Bankr. Docket 98.

2 Plaintiffs filed a second modified plan on June 15, 2018.
3 SAC ¶ 26; Bankr. Dockets 101-106. The second modified plan was 4 confirmed on August 24, 2018. SAC ¶ 27; Bankr. Docket 110. The 5 second modified plan is Plaintiffs' operative confirmed chapter 6 13 plan for purposes of this adversary proceeding. Valdellon, 7 2024 WL 404404 at *1.

8 All of Plaintiffs' confirmed chapter 13 plans provided for 9 payment of Defendants' claim as a Class 1 secured claim over a 10 sixty-month period, i.e., prepetition arrears and ongoing 11 postpetition mortgage payments were paid through the Trustee 12 according to § 1322(b)(5).⁶ SAC ¶¶ 28, 29, 146-148. The amount 13 of arrears to be paid under the second modified plan (and all 14 plans prior) was $19,140.48, as stated in a July 10, 2015, proof 15 of claim. SAC ¶¶ 162-163; Bankr. Claims Register, Claim 9-1.

16 Following confirmation of the second modified plan, 17 Plaintiffs again defaulted so, on September 9, 2019, the Trustee 18 moved to dismiss Plaintiffs' chapter 13 case. Bankr. Dockets 19 117-121. The motion to dismiss cited two grounds as cause for 20 dismissal: (1) "[t]he debtors [were] delinquent to the trustee in

22
23 ⁶Section 1322(b)(5) states as follows:

24 (b) Subject to subsections (a) and (c) of this section, 25 the plan may — ... (5) notwithstanding paragraph (2) of 26 this subsection, provide for the curing of any default 27 within a reasonable time and maintenance of payments 28 while the case is pending on any unsecured claim or secured claim on which the last payment is due after the date on which the final payment under the plan is due[.]"

1 the amount of $10,246.37 which represent[ed] approximately 3 plan
2 payments," Bankr. Docket 117 at ¶ 1; and (2) the "commitment 3 period exceed[ed] the permissible limit imposed by 11 U.S.C.
4 Section 1325(b) (4). The Debtor [sic] is currently in month 66 of 5 a 60 month plan." Id. at ¶ 2.

6 The Trustee's motion to dismiss was set for hearing on 7 September 24, 2019. Bankr. Docket 118. However, Plaintiffs 8 apparently cured the payment default sometime after the motion 9 was filed and before it was heard because the motion was 10 withdrawn on the record on September 24, 2019. Bankr. Docket 11 128.

12 Three days later, on September 27, 2019, the Trustee filed a 13 Notice to Debtor of Completed Plan Payments and Obligation to 14 File Documents which stated "the Chapter 13 Trustee has 15 determined that the Debtor has completed the payments required by 16 the confirmed plan." SAC ¶ 42; Bankr. Docket 130. On that same 17 date, September 27, 2019, the Trustee also filed a Notice of 18 Final Cure Payment which stated that "the amount required to cure 19 the default in [Claim 9] has been paid in full." SAC ¶ 43;
20 Bankr. Docket 125.

22 Defendants apparently agreed with the Trustee's final cure 23 notice because on October 18, 2019, they filed a Response to 24 Notice of Final Cure in which they stated, under penalty of 25 perjury, "[c]reditor agrees that the debtors have paid in full 26 the amount required to cure the prepetition default on the 27 creditor's claim" and "[c]reditor states that the debtor(s) are 28 current with all postpetition payments consistent with § 1322(b)(5) of the Bankruptcy Code including all fees, charges,

1 expenses, escrow, and costs. The next postpetition payment from 2 the debtor(s) is due on: 11/1/2019[.]” SAC ¶ 45-47; Claims 3 Register, Claim 9-1.

4 With plan payments completed, and with Defendants apparently 5 in agreement that with the completion of plan payments all 6 prepetition arrears were cured and postpetition payments were 7 current, the Trustee filed a final report and account on February 8 21, 2020. Bankr. Dockets 138, 139. The final report and account 9 was approved, and the Trustee was relieved of further obligations 10 in Plaintiffs’ chapter 13 case, on May 12, 2020. Bankr. Dockets 11 145, 146. Plaintiffs’ discharge was entered on June 1, 2020.
12 SAC ¶ 48; Bankr. Docket 149. Plaintiffs’ chapter 13 case was 13 closed on June 15, 2020. Bankr. Docket 151.

14 Facing a foreclosure, SAC ¶¶ 96, 107, 113, 125, 234, 206, 15 Plaintiffs reopened their chapter 13 case on January 20, 2021, 16 Bankr. Docket 154, and filed the initial complaint in this 17 adversary proceeding on January 21, 2021. Adv. Docket 1.
18 Defendants were served with a copy of the initial complaint and a 19 reissued summons on January 27, 2021. Adv. Docket 9. Defendants 20 filed an answer on March 24, 2021, Adv. Docket 19, and an amended 21 answer on April 9, 2021. Adv. Docket 23.

22 Because the court was unable to comprehend the initial 23 complaint which it characterized as a “shotgun pleading,” on June 24 28, 2021, the court ordered Plaintiffs to file an amended 25 complaint that separately identified each claim, Adv. Docket 47, 26 which they filed on July 13, 2021, Adv. Docket 59, and which 27 Defendants promptly moved to dismiss on July 26, 2021. Adv.
28 Docket 62. Following an opposition from Plaintiffs and a reply

1 from Defendants, on August 20, 2021, the court issued an order 2 granting Defendants' motion to dismiss. Plaintiffs' claims under 3 §§ 524(a) and (i) and an emotional distress claim based on the § 4 524 claims were dismissed with prejudice, and all remaining state 5 law claims were dismissed without prejudice. Adv. Docket 68. A 6 corresponding judgment was entered on August 20, 2021. Adv.
7 Docket 70.

8 Plaintiffs appealed the dismissal order and judgment on 9 September 1, 2021. Adv. Docket 75. Defendants elected to have 10 the appeal heard by the District Court and, on September 28, 11 2021, the appeal was transferred from the Ninth Circuit 12 Bankruptcy Appellate Panel to the District Court. Adv. Docket 13 87. The District Court heard oral argument on November 16, 2023, 14 and on February 2, 2024, it issued an order affirming in part and 15 reversing in part this court's decision of August 20, 2021. Adv.
16 Docket 102; see also Valdellon, 2024 WL 404404. The District 17 Court affirmed dismissal with prejudice of Plaintiffs' § 524(a) 18 claim and concluded that dismissal of Plaintiffs' § 524(i) claim 19 was also proper based on how the claim was pled. See Adv.
20 Dockets 114 at 6:3-10, 116 at 6:6-15. However, on de novo 21 review, the District Court stated it would have granted 22 Plaintiffs leave to amend the § 524(i) claim although leave was 23 never requested and amendment was never explained. Valdellon, 24 2024 WL 404404 at *8. The District Court remanded for that 25 purpose and to allow this court to consider an amended § 524(i) 26 claim in the first instance. Id. ("The Bankruptcy Court has not 27 yet considered Debtors' allegations that payments made by the 28 trustee under the Plan were misapplied and should give rise to a

1 section 524(i) claim."). Remand also included leave to re-allege 2 the emotional distress claim that was dismissed with prejudice 3 because it was based on the same factual allegations as the § 524 4 claims and the remaining state law claims that were dismissed 5 without prejudice. Id. at *9-*10.

6 Plaintiffs filed a second amended complaint on March 1, 7 2024. Adv. Docket 106. Like its predecessors, the second 8 amended complaint is a morass of allegations. It also completely 9 disregards the "short and plain statement" directive. See Fed.
10 R. Civ. P. 8(a); Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7008. Plaintiffs apparently 11 require two hundred and forty-eight paragraphs spread over 12 thirty-one pages to allege four "Counts."

13 Plaintiffs served Defendants with the second amended 14 complaint on March 1, 2024, Adv. Dockets 107-109, and Defendants 15 again promptly moved to dismiss it on March 13, 2024. Adv.
16 Docket 112. Plaintiffs filed an opposition on April 2, 2024, 17 Adv. Docket 116, and Defendants filed a reply on April 9, 2024.
18 Adv. Docket 119. The parties also filed supplemental points and 19 authorities addressing the emotional distress claim in Count 2.
20 Adv. Dockets 125, 127. The motion to dismiss was heard on April 21 30, 2024. Appearances were noted on the record.

22 The specifics of each Count, and the reasons for their 23 respective dismissals, are discussed in Section IV, infra.

25

III. Legal Standard

26 A complaint may be dismissed for "failure to state a claim 27 upon which relief can be granted." Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6); 28

1 Fed. R. Bankr. P. 7012(b). "A Rule 12(b)(6) dismissal may be 2 based on either a lack of a cognizable legal theory or the 3 absence of sufficient facts alleged under a cognizable legal 4 theory." Johnson v. Riverside Healthcare System, LP, 534 F.3d 5 1116, 1121 (9th Cir. 2008).

6 "To survive a motion to dismiss, a complaint must contain 7 sufficient factual matter, accepted as true, to 'state a claim to 8 relief that is plausible on its face.'" Ashcroft v. Iqbal, 556 9 U.S. 662, 678 (2009) (quoting Bell Atlantic Corporation v.
10 Twombly, 550 U.S. 544, 570 (2007)). "A claim has facial 11 plausibility when the plaintiff pleads factual content that 12 allows the court to draw the reasonable inference that defendant 13 is liable for the misconduct alleged." Id. (citing Twombly, 550 14 U.S. at 556).

15 In ruling on a Rule 12(b)(6) motion to dismiss, the court 16 accepts all factual allegations as true and construes them, and 17 reasonable inferences drawn from them, in a light most favorable 18 to the non-moving party. Arizona Students' Association v.
19 Arizona Board of Regents, 824 F.3d 858, 864 (9th Cir. 2016).
20 Legal conclusions are not accepted as true. Iqbal, 556 U.S. at 21 678.

22 The court may also consider limited materials outside the 23 pleadings. These include documents attached to the complaint, 24 documents incorporated by reference in the complaint, and matters 25 subject to judicial notice. Swartz v. KPMG LLP, 476 F.3d 756, 26 763 (9th Cir. 2007) (per curium). The latter includes the 27 court's own records. Kelly v. Johnston, 111 F.2d 613, 615 (9th 28 Cir. 1940).

IV. Analysis

A. Count 2 - Intentional Infliction of Emotional Distress
Based on a Violation of § 524(a) (2) Under § 524(i)

Count 2 alleges a claim for intentional infliction of emotional distress "based upon the same common factual allegations as Count 1." SAC ¶ 208. Count 1 alleges that Defendants violated § 524(i) which treats a violation of its terms as a violation of § 524(a)(2). Count 2 thus seeks emotional distress damages for a violation of the discharge injunction. In that regard, Count 2 fails as a matter of law. Plaintiffs may not recover emotional distress damages based on a violation of the discharge injunction either directly or through § 524(i).

One court recently observed that “[t]here is a disagreement among courts across the circuits on whether damages for emotional distress may be awarded in cases involving the violation of the discharge injunction.” In re Weaver, 2023 WL 3362064, at *7 (Bankr. E.D. Mich. May 10, 2023).⁷ The Ninth Circuit has not directly addressed the issue.

⁷Circuit decisions are also sparse. The First Circuit in United States v. Torres (In re Torres), 432 F.3d 20, 31 (1st Cir. 2005), stated that "sovereign immunity bars awards for emotional distress damages against the federal government under § 105(a) for any willful violation of § 524, and that immunity is not waived by § 106" and "recognizing a waiver of sovereign immunity for emotional distress damages in this case would run afoul of § 106(a)(5), which forbids the creation of any substantive claim for relief 'not otherwise existing under this title, the Federal Rules of Bankruptcy, or non-bankruptcy law.'" In Green Point Credit, LLC v. McClean (In re McClean), 794 F.3d 1313, 1325 (11th Cir. 2015), the Eleventh Circuit allowed emotional distress damages for a discharge injunction violation based on a § 362 analysis by analogy. More on this later.

1 There is inconsistency on this issue within the Ninth 2 Circuit. For example, Idaho bankruptcy courts have held that 3 emotional distress damages are not available for violations of 4 the discharge injunction. In re Pohlman, 2018 WL 3854137, at *6 5 (Bankr. D. Idaho Aug. 10, 2018); In re Urwin, 2010 WL 148645, at 6 *8 (Bankr. D. Idaho Jan. 14, 2010). But this is an exception to 7 the general practice by courts in the Ninth Circuit which is to 8 award emotional distress damages by analogizing discharge 9 injunction violations-and awards of compensatory damages 10 thereunder-to violations of the automatic stay-and awards of 11 compensatory damages thereunder. See In re Feldmeier, 335 B.R.
12 807, 813 (Bankr. D. Or. 2005) ("Although the Ninth Circuit has 13 not spoken on this issue, I believe its opinion on the 14 availability of emotional distress damages for violation of the 15 automatic stay is instructive."). Two opinions illustrate this 16 practice and its corresponding analysis.

17 The bankruptcy court in In re Nordlund, 494 B.R. 507 (Bankr.
18 E.D. Cal. 2011), concluded that emotional distress damages were 19 recoverable for the creditor's violations of the discharge 20 injunction. It reached its decision by relying on the automatic 21 stay violation analysis in Knupfer v. Lindblade (In re Dyer), 322 22 F.3d 1178 (9th Cir. 2003), and Feldmeier, supra, to conclude that 23 to the extent emotional distress damages are compensatory damages 24 recoverable for violations of the automatic stay, by analogy, 25 they are similarly recoverable for violations of the discharge injunction. Id. at 522-23.

26 The Ninth Circuit Bankruptcy Appellate Panel reached a 27 similar conclusion based on a similar analysis six years later in

1 Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC v. Marino (In re Marino), 577 B.R. 772
2 (9th Cir. BAP 2017), aff'd in part on other grounds, appeal
3 dismissed in part, Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC v. Marino (In re 4 Marino), 949 F.3d 483 (9th Cir. 2020), cert. denied, Marino v.
5 Ocwen Loan Servicing, LLC (In re Marino), 141 S. Ct. 1683 (2021).
6 In Marino, the Ninth Circuit Bankruptcy Appellate Panel wrote as 7 follows:

8 The Ninth Circuit has allowed emotional distress 9 damages for automatic stay violations when the debtor 10 '(1) suffer[s] significant harm, (2) clearly 11 establish[es] the significant harm, and (3) 12 demonstrate[s] a causal connection between that 13 significant harm and the violation of the automatic 14 stay (as distinct, for instance, from the anxiety and 15 pressures inherent in the bankruptcy process).' 16 Snowden v. Check Into Cash of Wash. Inc. (In re 17 Snowden), 769 F.3d 651, 657 (9th Cir. 2014) (quoting 18 Dawson v. Wash. Mutual Bank, F.A. (In re Dawson), 390
19 F.3d 1139, 1149 (9th Cir. 2004)) (discussing violation 20 of the automatic stay). The same rule should apply to 21 violations of the discharge injunction. See In re 22 Nordlund, 494 B.R. at 523 (applying Dawson's three-part 23 test to violations of the discharge injunction); C & W 24 Asset Acquisition, LLC v. Feagins (In re Feagins), 439
25 B.R. 165, 178 (Bankr. D. Haw. 2010) ('Although Dawson 26 considered the remedy for violations of the automatic 27 stay under section 362(k)(1), the same reasoning 28 applies to willful violations of the discharge injunction.').

20 Id. at 787.⁸

22 ⁸But see Rushmore Loan Management Services, LLC v. Moon (In 23 re Moon), 2021 WL 62629 (9th Cir. BAP Jan. 7, 2021), appeal 24 dismissed, 2021 WL 3509163 (9th Cir., Apr. 19, 2021). In 25 Rushmore, "[t]he [bankruptcy] court declined to award [one of the 26 debtors] emotional distress damages, because she testified that 27 her distress was caused by Rushmore's discharge injunction 28 violations, not stay violations." Id. at *3. The debtors
 "challenge[d] the bankruptcy court's decision to not award damages for Rushmore's violation of the discharge injunction."
 Id. at *4. The Ninth Circuit Bankruptcy Appellate Panel concluded that "[t]he bankruptcy court did not abuse its discretion by not awarding the [debtors] discharge injunction violation damages." Id. at *10.

1 Notably, Nordlund and Marino predate Taggart. That makes a 2 difference. In several respects, Taggart changes the civil 3 contempt landscape as it pertains to the discharge injunction and 4 the compensatory damages that a bankruptcy court may award to 5 enforce the discharge injunction or remedy its violation.⁹

6 First, in Taggart, the Supreme Court explained critical 7 distinctions between the automatic stay and the discharge 8 injunction as follows:

9 An automatic stay is entered at the outset of a 10 bankruptcy proceeding. The statutory provision that 11 addresses the remedies for violations of automatic 12 stays says that 'an individual injured by any willful 13 violation' of an automatic stay 'shall recover actual 14 damages, including costs and attorneys' fees, and, in 15 appropriate circumstances, may recover punitive 16 damages.' 11 U.S.C. § 362(k)(1). This language, 17 however, differs from the more general language in 18 section 105(a). Supra, at 1801. The purposes of 19 automatic stays and discharge orders also differ: A 20 stay aims to prevent damaging disruptions to the 21 administration of a bankruptcy case in the short run, 22 whereas a discharge is entered at the end of the case 23 and seeks to bind creditors over a much longer period.

24 Taggart, 139 S. Ct. at 1803-04.

25 Second, the Supreme Court rejected a proposal by Taggart to 26 apply the standard that governs a determination of whether the 27 automatic stay is violated to a determination of whether the 28

29 ⁹As noted below, Taggart also notes that another purpose of 30 civil contempt is to coerce compliance. See also United States 31 v. United Mine Workers of America, 330 U.S. 258, 303-04 (1947); 32 Doyle v. London Guarantee & Accident Company, Limited, 204 U.S.
33 599, 604-05 (1907). Civil contempt sanctions may therefore 34 include "mild" punitive damages. Lenore L. Albert-Sheridan, dba 35 Law Offices of Lenore Albert v. State Bar of California (In re 36 Albert-Sheridan), --- B.R. ---- 2024 WL 1401289, at *20 (9th Cir.
37 BAP April 2, 2024) (citing Marino, 577 B.R. 788-89 & n.12). This 38 aspect of civil contempt is not before the court; however, the 39 court notes that the $4,500,000.00 in punitive damages demanded 40 by Plaintiffs are anything but "mild."

1 discharge injunction is violated, i.e., "a finding of civil 2 contempt if the creditor was aware of the discharge order and 3 intended the actions that violated the order." Id. at 1803.
4 Citing distinct and discernable differences between the automatic 5 stay and the discharge injunction, the Supreme Court concluded 6 "[t]hese differences in language and purpose sufficiently 7 undermine Taggart's proposal to warrant its rejection." Id. at 8 1804.

9 Third, the Supreme Court in Taggart made it unmistakably 10 clear that a violation of the discharge injunction is an act of 11 civil contempt governed by historical standards. It explained:

12 Here, the statutes specifying that a discharge order 13 'operates as an injunction,' § 524(a)(2), and that a 14 court may issue any 'order' or 'judgment' that is 15 'necessary or appropriate' to 'carry out' other bankruptcy provisions, § 105(a), bring with them the 'old soil' that has long governed how courts enforce injunctions.

16 That 'old soil' includes the 'potent weapon' of civil 17 contempt. Longshoremen v. Philadelphia Marine Trade
18 Assn., 389 U.S. 64, 76, 88 S.Ct. 201, 19 L.Ed.2d 236
(1967). Under traditional principles of equity 19 practice, courts have long imposed civil contempt sanctions to 'coerce the defendant into compliance' 20 with an injunction or 'compensate the complainant for losses' stemming from the defendant's noncompliance 21 with an injunction. United States v. Mine Workers, 330
U.S. 258, 303-304, 67 S.Ct. 677, 91 L.Ed. 884 (1947); 22 see D. Dobbs & C. Roberts, Law of Remedies § 2.8, p.
132 (3d ed. 2018); J. High, Law of Injunctions § 1449, 23 p. 940 (2d ed. 1880).

24 Id. at 1801.

25 Fourth, and most important, in reference to the "old soil" 26 of civil contempt, the Supreme Court stated that the "traditional 27 civil contempt principles apply straightforwardly to the 28 bankruptcy discharge context." Id. at 1802.

Two salient points emerge from Taggart. First, the place to 1 look to determine if the civil contempt remedy allows bankruptcy 2 courts to award emotional distress damages for violations of the 3 discharge injunction is the "old soil" of injunction enforcement 4 and its "traditional principles" of civil contempt and not § 362

5 by analogy. Second, the duty of the bankruptcy court is to apply 6 the "old soil" and "traditional principles" concepts 7 "straightforwardly" to the discharge injunction.

8 An analysis begins with the recognition that there is no 9 private right action to enforce the discharge injunction. Walls 10 v. Wells Fargo Bank, N.A., 276 F.3d 502, 510 (9th Cir. 2002) ("We 11 cannot say that Congress intended to create a private right of 12 action under § 524, and we shall not imply one."); see also In re 13 Costa, 172 B.R. 954, 965-66 (Bankr. E.D. Cal. 1994) (same).
14 Rather, as the Supreme Court explained in Taggart, the discharge 15 injunction is enforced and its violations are remedied through a 16 civil contempt action under § 105(a). Taggart, 139 S. Ct. at 17 1801; see also Brown v. Transworld Systems, Inc., 73 F.4th 1030, 18 1038 (9th Cir. 2023) ("The appropriate remedy [for a violation of 19 the discharge injunction] is contempt of court against the 20 offending creditor pursuant to 11 U.S.C. § 105(a)."); Renwick v.
21 Bennett (In re Bennett), 298 F.3d 1059, 1069 (9th Cir. 2002) ("We 22 have recently held that section 524(a) may be enforced by the 23 court's contempt power under 11 U.S.C. section 105(a).").

24 A civil contempt action to enforce or remedy violations of 25 the discharge injunction brings with it potential liability for 26 compensatory damages. Walls, 276 F.3d at 507 ("[C]ompensatory 27 civil contempt allows an aggrieved debtor to obtain compensatory 28 damages, attorneys fees, and the offending creditor's compliance

1 with the discharge injunction."); see also Brown, 73 F.4th at 2 1038 (reaffirming availability of compensatory damages as stated 3 in Walls). But what exactly are compensatory damages? Bohac v.
4 Department of Agriculture, 239 F.3d 1334 (Fed. Cir. 2001), offers 5 the following explanation and notes a critical distinction:

6 Compensatory damages are the damages awarded to a 7 person as compensation, indemnity or restitution for 8 harm sustained by him. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 9 903 (1979). Compensatory damages are divided into two 10 categories: pecuniary and non-pecuniary. Id. at §§ 11 905 and 906. Non-pecuniary compensatory damages 12 include compensation for bodily harm and emotional 13 distress, and are awarded without proof of pecuniary 14 loss. Id. at § 905.

15 Id. at 1341 (internal quotation marks omitted).

16 Fundamental is that the Supreme Court and the Ninth Circuit 17 put emotional distress damages in the nonpecuniary category.

18 Cummings v. Premier Rehab Keller, P.L.L.C., 596 U.S. 212, 227 19 (2022) (emotional distress damages are typically awarded "where 20 the injury entails more than a pecuniary loss"); Federal Aviation 21 Administration v. Cooper, 566 U.S. 284, 302 (2012) (referring to 22 "mental and emotional harm" as "nonpecuniary"); United States v.
23 Alvarez, 567 U.S. 709, 749 n.14 (2012) (Alito, J., with whom 24 Scalia, J., and Thomas, J., joined, dissenting) ("the harm 25 remedied by the torts of . . . intentional infliction of 26 emotional distress . . . is often nonpecuniary in nature"); Rouse 27 v. United States Department of State, 567 F.3d 408, 417 (9th Cir.
28 2009) ("The resulting prolonged imprisonment caused Rouse extreme emotional distress and other nonpecuniary harms."); Farrens v.
Meridian Oil, Inc., 852 F.2d 1289, 1988 WL 79482, at *3 (9th Cir.
July 19, 1988) ("Second, the award included nonpecuniary damages for emotional distress and loss of reputation[.]").

1 Characterization of damages for emotional distress as 2 nonpecuniary is significant because the "old soil" of injunction 3 enforcement and its "traditional principles" of civil contempt 4 did not compensate parties injured by injunction violations or 5 other acts of disobedience of court process for nonpecuniary 6 loss, emotional distress or otherwise. In other words, the 7 historical measure of compensation awarded in civil contempt 8 actions was pecuniary loss.

9 The United States largely adopted the English concept of 10 civil contempt and its associated purposes and remedies. Joseph 11 H. Beale, Jr., Contempt of Court, Criminal and Civil, Harvard Law 12 Journal, Vol. 21, No. 3, 161 at 167-69 (1908). The Supreme Court 13 recognized this, and it recognized that English courts limited 14 compensation for civil contempt to pecuniary loss, in its 1897 15 opinion in Hovey v. Elliott, et al., 167 U.S. 409 (1897), in 16 which it stated as follows:

17 The conclusion which we have reached accords with that 18 of Daniell, who, in his Chancery Pleadings and Practice 19 (volume 1, pp. *504, *505), [notes]:

20 ... the personal and pecuniary inconvenience 21 to which a party subjects himself by a 22 contempt of the ordinary process of the 23 court[.]

24 Id. at 436 (emphasis added).

25 The Supreme Court reiterated this critical point fourteen 26 years later in Gompers v. Buck's Stove & Range Company, 221 U.S.
27 418 (1911), in which it wrote as follows:

28 In this case the alleged contempt did not consist in the defendant's refusing to do any affirmative act required, but rather in doing that which had been prohibited. The only possible remedial relief for such disobedience would have been to impose a fine for the use of complainant, measured in some degree by the 1 pecuniary injury caused by the act of disobedience.

2 Id. at 443-44 (emphasis added, citations omitted).¹⁰

3 The weight of authority from other Circuits also supports 4 the conclusion that the civil contempt remedy does not include 5 nonpecuniary compensation for emotional distress. The Eighth 6 Circuit in McBride v. Coleman, 955 F.2d 571 (8th Cir.), cert.
7 denied, 506 U.S. 819 (1992), which dealt with the power of civil 8 contempt more generally, not specifically under §§ 105(a) and 9 524(a)(2), vacated a judgment awarding emotional distress damages 10 and in the course of doing so stated as follows:

11 A special word is in order regarding the award of 13 ¹⁰The Supreme Court cited "Rapalje, Contempts, §§ 131-134" to support this passage. The full citation is Stewart Rapalje, A Treatise on Contempt Including Civil and Criminal Contempts of Judicial Tribunals, Justices of the Peace, Legislative Bodies, Municipal Boards, Committees, Notaries, Commissioners, Referees and Other Officers exercising judicial and quasi-judicial functions, L.K. Strouse & Co., Law Publishers (1884). Section 131 is captioned "The fine-what included" and refers to the civil contempt fine imposed for disobedience of an order or decree as compensation or indemnity for "pecuniary injury." Section 133 is captioned "Compensation to an injured party" and refers to the "loss or injury" compensated through civil contempt as a "pecuniary loss or injury."

21 The Supreme Court also supported the passage with citations to Wells, Fargo & Co. v. Oregon Ry. & Nav. Co., 19 Fed. 20 (Cir. Ct. Or. 1884), Woodruff v. North Bloomfield Gravel-Min. Co. (In re North Bloomfield Gravel-Min. Co.), 27 Fed. 795 (Cir. Ct. Cal. 1886), and Sabin v. Fogarty, 70 Fed. 482 (Cir. Ct. Wash. 1895). The measure of compensation for the civil contempt in each case was pecuniary loss. Wells, Fargo & Co., 19 Fed. at 23; Woodruff, 27 Fed. at 799-800; Sabin, 70 Fed. at 485. Notable is that each opinion is by a federal appellate court in or what was to become the Ninth Circuit. So not only does the Ninth Circuit's historical civil contempt precedent align neatly with Supreme Court authority, but, the Ninth Circuit's historical civil contempt precedent which recognized pecuniary loss as the measure of compensation for civil contempt is part of the "old soil" of injunction enforcement and its "traditional principles" of civil contempt.

1 $50,000.00 for emotional distress. Even assuming 2 arguendo a causal relationship between the violation of 3 the injunction and the harm suffered, we do not believe 4 civil contempt to be an appropriate vehicle for 5 awarding damages for emotional distress[.] The 6 problems of proof, assessment, and appropriate 7 compensation attendant to awarding damages for 8 emotional distress are troublesome enough in the 9 ordinary tort case, and should not be imported into 10 civil contempt proceedings. Although in some 11 circumstances an award of damages to a party injured by 12 the violation of an injunction may be appropriate, the 13 contempt power is not to be used as a comprehensive 14 device for redressing private injuries, and it does not 15 encompass redress for injuries of this sort.

16 Id. at 577 (internal citations omitted).

17 In Burd v. Walters (In re Walters), 868 F.2d 665 (4th Cir.
18 1989), the Fourth Circuit stated that "[n]o authority is offered 19 to support the proposition that emotional distress is an 20 appropriate item of damages for civil contempt, and we know of 21 none." Id. at 670. In Weitzman v. Stein, 98 F.3d 717 (2d Cir.
22 1996), the Second Circuit similarly stated that "the district 23 court was within its right to reject Weitzman's claim for 24 compensation for the emotional distress she and her husband 25 suffered because of the contempt." Id. at 720. And in the 26 context of discussing the Bankruptcy Code, the district court in 27 United States v. Harchar, 331 B.R. 720 (N.D. Ohio 2005), observed 28 that "[t]here is little indication that awarding damages for emotional harm was commonplace under the bankruptcy court's traditional contempt procedures—or in any contempt procedures familiar to Congress in 1984." Id. at 730 (emphasis in original).

29 In an effort to bring nonpecuniary damages for emotional 30 distress under the civil contempt umbrella, Plaintiffs cite Leman 31 v. Krentler-Arnold Last Hinge Co., 284 U.S. 448 (1932), for the

1 proposition that "an expansive view of damages available in 2 actions for violation of an injunction has long been recognized."
3 Adv. Docket 127 at 6:24-25. Plaintiffs assert that Leman is 4 authority for the court to use its equitable powers to award 5 nonpecuniary emotional distress damages for civil contempt to 6 "insure full compensation to the injured party." Leman, 284 U.S.
7 at 456. Plaintiffs misread Leman.

8 Leman was an appeal from a final decree entered in a civil 9 contempt proceeding in which the District Court found a patent 10 infringer guilty of contempt for deliberate violation of an 11 injunction and ordered the contemnor to pay the injured party 12 over $39,000.00 in profits it made as a result of its violation.
13 Id. at 450-51. The Court of Appeals sustained the contempt order 14 but reversed the District Court's award of profits holding that 15 the profits could not be recovered as a measure of pecuniary 16 loss. More precisely, the Court of Appeals stated as follows:
17

18 But we are of the opinion that the District Court went 19 far afield and exceeded its authority in decreeing that 20 the complainants recover profits made by the respondent 21 by the infringement of the letters patent. In Gompers 22 v. Buck's Store & Range Co., supra, and Kreplik v.
23 Couch Patents Co., supra, 190 F. at page 569, it was 24 pointed out that the proper remedial relief for the 25 disobedience of an injunction in an equity case is to 26 impose a 'fine for the use of the complainant, measured 27 in some degree by the pecuniary injury caused by the 28 act of disobedience.' In other words, that the amount of the fine or remedial relief is to be governed largely by the pecuniary damage or injury which the act of disobedience caused the complainant. The pecuniary damage surely does not include profits which the defendant made by reason of the infringement. The item of profits should not have been allowed or taken into consideration in determining the remedial relief to which the complainants were entitled by way of fine or otherwise.

Krentler-Arnold Hinge Last Co. v. Leman, 50 F.2d 699, 707 (1st

1 Cir. 1931) (emphasis added).¹¹

2 On the issue of whether the profits were recoverable, the 3 Supreme Court reversed the Court of Appeals. Noting that the 4 amount of profits had been "ascertained" in the District Court 5 proceedings, Leman, 284 U.S. at 455, the Supreme Court held that 6 the profits were the equivalent of or a substitute for the 7 injured party's actual pecuniary loss. Id. at 456; see also Rick 8 v. Buchansky, 2001 WL 936293, *6 (S.D.N.Y. Aug. 16, 2001) ("Where 9 actual pecuniary loss is difficult to prove, compensatory relief 10 may include profits derived by the contemnor from the violation 11 of a court order."). In other words, the Supreme Court treated 12 the profits in the contemnor's possession "as if" they were the 13 injured party's compensatory damages. In so doing, the Supreme 14 Court rejected the Court of Appeals' narrow view of the pecuniary 15 loss recoverable for civil contempt and adopted a more expansive 16 view. Leman, 284 U.S. at 456.

17 The point here is that Leman added more to the bucket of 18 pecuniary losses recoverable as compensatory damages for civil 19 contempt. It did not add new or different types of damages to 20 that bucket, i.e., nonpecuniary for emotional distress or 21 otherwise, as Plaintiffs suggest. In that regard, the court does 22 not read Leman as support for the proposition that emotional 23 distress damages are-or historically have been-recoverable for

26 ¹¹The Court of Appeals adhered to its initial opinion on 27 rehearing. See Krentler-Arnold Hinge Last Company v. J. Howard Leman, Administrator, C. T. A., et al., 1931 WL 26200 (1st Cir.
28 June 29, 1931). The rehearing opinion makes it even more clear that the Court of Appeals considered the profits at issue in the context of pecuniary loss and not as something else. Id. At *6.

1 civil contempt.

2 Duty bound here to look to the "old soil" of injunction 3 enforcement and apply its "traditional principles" of civil 4 contempt "straightforwardly" to the discharge injunction, the 5 weight of historical authority compels the court to hold that 6 Plaintiffs may not recover nonpecuniary emotional distress 7 damages based on a claim under § 524(i) which treats a violation 8 of its terms as a violation of § 524(a)(2). The measure of 9 recovery for civil contempt under § 105(a) for a violation of § 10 524(a)(2)-either directly or through § 524(i)-is compensatory 11 damages for pecuniary loss. Count 2 will therefore be dismissed.
12 And because further amendment to claim emotional distress damages 13 for a violation of the discharge injunction would be futile, 14 Count 2 will be dismissed with prejudice and without leave to 15 amend.
16

17 B. Count 1 - The Amended Claim Under 11 U.S.C. § 524(i)

18 Count 1 alleges that in violation of § 524(i) Defendants 19 willfully failed to credit payments they received from the 20 Trustee and, thus, Defendants willfully failed to credit payments 21 received "under a plan." Defendants move to dismiss the amended 22 § 524(i) claim in Count 1 for two reasons: (1) Plaintiffs' 23 second modified plan was in default; and (2) Plaintiffs have not 24 sufficiently alleged that payments Defendants received from the 25 Trustee, i.e., payments "under a plan," were improperly credited.
26 Defendants' arguments have merit and the court agrees with both.

27 1. ". . . unless . . . the plan is in default . . ."

28 Section § 524(i) makes it a violation of the discharge injunction of § 524(a)(2) for a creditor to willfully fail to 1 credit payments received "under a plan" if the failure causes 2 material injury "unless . . . the plan is in default." 11 U.S.C. § 3 524(i). There are two relevant defaults for consideration here.

4 The first default was a monetary default consisting of three 5 missed plan payments in excess of $10,000.00. Based on an 6 initial plan payment due in April 2014, these payments should 7 have been made no later than March 2019 and would have been due 8 for January, February, and March 2019. This monetary default was 9 apparently considered to have been cured sometime before the 10 Trustee's motion to dismiss was heard in September 2019 because 11 the Trustee withdrew the motion and thereafter filed notice that 12 Plaintiffs completed their plan payments.

13 The second default was a nonmonetary default consisting of a 14 chapter 13 plan term that exceeded the applicable (and maximum 15 allowable) sixty-month commitment period by six months. See 11 16 U.S.C. §§ 1322(d), 1325(b)(4).¹² As the Trustee noted in his 17 September 2019 motion to dismiss, when the motion was filed 18 Plaintiffs were in month sixty-six of a sixty month plan and were 19 three plan payments short. In other words, Plaintiffs failed to 20 make their final three plan payments before the maximum allowable 21 commitment period of five years expired and Plaintiffs did not 22 make those payments until some six months later. Plaintiffs' 23 failure to make their final three plan payments before the sixty-

25
26
27 ¹²Section 1322(d) states, in relevant part, that a chapter 28 13 "plan may not provide for payments over a period that is longer than 5 years." 11 U.S.C. § 1322(d).

Section 1325(b)(4) defines the "applicable commitment period" for above-median debtors as "not less than 5 years." 11 U.S.C. § 1325(b)(5).

1 month commitment period expired was an incurable material default
2 under the second modified plan.¹³ In re Kinney, 2019 WL 7938815
3 (Bankr. D. Colo. Feb. 27, 2019), aff'd, Kinney v. HSBC Bank USA, 4 N.A. (In re Kinney), 5 F.4th 1136 (10th Cir. 2021), cert. denied, 5 143 S. Ct. 302 (2022), illustrates this point.

6 In Kinney, the debtor "failed to make the last three 7 mortgage payments [required under her Chapter 13 plan] during the 8 [five year] plan period." Kinney, 2019 WL 7938815 at *1.
9 Instead, the debtor made three payments about two and a half 10 months after the end of the five-year chapter 13 plan term and 11 then requested a discharge anyway. Id. at 1-2. The bankruptcy 12 court characterized the debtor's actions as a "material default" 13 in her chapter 13 plan and dismissed the chapter 13 case without 14 entry of a discharge. Id. at *4. On appeal, the Tenth Circuit 15 affirmed and characterized the debtor's default as incurable once 16 the plan's five-year period ended. Kinney, 5 F. 4th at 1140. It 17 emphatically stated: "The bankruptcy code suggests that material 18 defaults cannot be cured after the plan has ended." Id. at 1143; 19 In re Jaggars, 2023 WL 7007491, at *1 (Bankr. E.D. Okl. Oct. 23, 20 2023) ("As the parties correctly note, the Tenth Circuit opinion 21 in In re Kinney, 5 F.4th 1136 (10th Cir. 2021) holds that once a 22 plan's five-year period expires, a bankruptcy court is without 23 authority to allow a debtor to cure a 'material default.'").

24 Technically, Plaintiffs should not have been permitted to

26 27 28 ¹³Section 2.03 of Plaintiffs' second modified plan also states as follows: "If necessary to complete the plan, monthly payments may continue for an additional 6 months, but in no event shall monthly payments continue for more than 60 months."

1 make their final three plan payments after the sixty-month
2 commitment period ended because doing so was an impermissible 3 plan modification under § 1329(c).¹⁴ Kinney, 5 F.4th at 1144.
4 Dismissal would have been entirely appropriate. But nobody 5 objected and the Trustee withdrew the motion to dismiss so 6 Plaintiffs managed to receive a discharge by the good grace of 7 the Trustee. That, however, does not change the status of the 8 second modified plan as a plan subject to an incurable material 9 default.¹⁵ And it is precisely this incurable material default 10 that renders § 524(i) inapplicable as a matter of law because a 11 plan in default will not support a § 524(i) claim. Count 1 will 12 therefore be dismissed with prejudice and without leave to amend.
13

14 2. " . . . willful failure of a creditor to credit payments received under a plan confirmed under [Title 11] . . . "

15 It initially bears repeating what the District Court made 16 clear about an amended § 524(i) claim; specifically, that post-

18 ¹⁴Section 1329(c) states as follows:

19 20 A plan modified under this section may not provide for payments over a period that expires after the 21 applicable commitment period under section 22 1325(b)(1)(B) after the time that the first payment under the original confirmed plan was due, unless the 23 court, for cause, approves a longer period, but the court may not approve a period that expires after five 24 years after such time.

25 11 U.S.C. § 1329(c).

26 ¹⁵That a discharge was entered does not change this. See United Student Aid Funds, Inc. v. Espinosa, 559 U.S. 260 (2010).
27 Moreover, § 1328(a) states that the "as soon as practicable after completion by the debtor of all payments under the plan . . . the 28 court shall grant the debtor a discharge." 11 U.S.C. § 1328(a).
Technically, all plan payments were completed. They were just completed significantly late.

1 plan payments, or payments Plaintiffs began making directly to 2 Defendants beginning in October 2019 after their final plan 3 payment in September 2019, are not payments "under a plan" within 4 the meaning of § 524(i). Valdellon, 2024 WL 404404 at *6 ("The 5 Court agrees with the Bankruptcy Court that the post-plan 6 payments were not payments made 'under the plan.'"). That means 7 the only payments this court need consider as payments "under a 8 plan" for purposes of Plaintiffs' amended § 524(i) claim are 9 those payments Defendants received from the Trustee through 10 Plaintiffs' final plan payment in September 2019. Id. at *8 11 ("The Bankruptcy Court has not yet considered Debtors' 12 allegations that payments made by the trustee under the Plan were 13 misapplied and should give rise to a section 524(i) claim.").
14

15 Plaintiffs do not identify any specific plan payments that 16 Defendants miscredited. Rather, Defendants' alleged liability 17 under § 524(i) is based on an inference that arises as follows:
18 (1) the Trustee paid Defendants $19,140.48 in prepetition arrears 19 (as he was obligated to do based on Claim 9-1), SAC ¶ 162, 163, 20 169; (2) as of January 17, 2019, statements Plaintiffs received 21 from Defendants showed $19,211.02 credited to prepetition arrears 22 from payments received from the Trustee, SAC ¶ 164 & Ex. 23; and 23 (3) through August 16, 2019, statements Plaintiffs received from 24 Defendants showed $20,623.04 credited to prepetition arrears from 25 payments received from the Trustee, SAC ¶ 165 & Ex. 23. From the 26 differences in arrears actually paid and arrears stated as paid 27 on statements, Plaintiffs surmise that Defendants over-allocated 28 plan payments to prepetition arrears and under-allocated plan payments to postpetition payments. SAC ¶¶ 166-168, 170-172; see

1 also Adv. Docket 116 at 12:3-8 ("Here, Valdellons have alleged 2 and shown that Defendants credited, from payments made by the 3 Chapter 13 Trustee, more money to pre-petition arrears than was 4 paid by the Chapter 13 Trustee to pre-petition arrears. The only 5 way Defendants could have credited, from payments made by the 6 Chapter 13 Trustee, more money to pre-petition arrears than was 7 paid by the Trustee is for Defendants to have diverted money 8 intended for ongoing maintenance payments to pre-petition 9 arrears.") (former emphasis added, latter emphasis in original).
10 However, at the same time that Plaintiffs suggest that plan 11 payments were improperly credited, Plaintiffs rely on Defendants' 12 sworn response to the Trustee's final cure notice to allege that 13 postpetition loan payments made from plan payments were current 14 when the final plan payment was made in September 2019. SAC ¶¶ 15 45-47, 146-148.

17 If the court must accept as true that it was undisputed in 18 September 2019 that Plaintiffs' loan was current as to its 19 postpetition payments, then the only logical conclusion is that 20 plan payments were properly credited. Indeed, Plaintiffs concede 21 as much in their opposition. Adv. Docket 116 at 15:20-22 ("If 22 Defendants had credited payments in accordance with the Trustee's 23 designations and the Trustee's Notice of Final Cure, Valdellons 24 would be current in payments through September 1, 2019 [sic] with 25 payments made by the Chapter 13 Trustee."). It cannot be true 26 that plan payments were miscredited and, at the same time, 27 miscredited plan payments cured arrears and kept postpetition 28 payments current. In other words, if plan payments were miscredited as they are alleged to have been, i.e., over-

1 allocated to prepetition arrears and under-allocated to 2 postpetition payments, Plaintiffs' loan would not (and could not 3 have been) current as it is alleged it was, and as it is further 4 alleged it was undisputed it was, in September 2019.

5 It may be that something went wrong with Plaintiffs' loan.
6 And it may be that payments after October 2019 were misapplied, 7 miscalculated, or miscredited. But as the District Court here 8 held, those payments are not payments "under a plan" for purposes 9 of § 524(i) so whatever Defendants did with those payments and 10 how they were credited, applied, or processed is not, and can not 11 be, a basis for liability under § 524(i).

12 In any event, for the reasons stated above, the court 13 concludes that Plaintiffs have not alleged a viable (much less 14 plausible) amended § 524(i) claim. So even if the second 15 modified plan was not a plan in default, Count 1 would 16 nevertheless be dismissed with prejudice and without leave to 17 amend on the foregoing independent and alternative grounds.

18 C. Counts 3 and 4 - Non-Core State Law Claims

19 The claims alleged in Counts 3 and 4 are non-core state law 20 claims. Count 3 alleges claims for breach of contract, negligent 21 infliction of emotional distress, and declaratory relief. SAC ¶¶ 22 215-237. Count 4 alleges a claim for Unlawful Fraudulent and 23 Unfair Business Acts and Practices (California Business and 24 Professions Code § 17200 et seq.). SAC ¶¶ 238-248.

25 1. Subject Matter Jurisdiction Under 28 U.S.C. § 1334

26 The non-core state law claims in Counts 3 and 4 do not 27 "arise under" Title 11 or "arise in" a case under Title 11. See 28 U.S.C. § 1334. They also are not "related to" Plaintiffs'

1 chapter 13 case.

2 "Related to" jurisdiction exists only if, in any way, "the 3 outcome of the proceeding could conceivably have any effect on 4 the estate being administered in bankruptcy." Fietz v. Great 5 Western Savings (In re Fietz), 852 F.2d 455, 457 (9th Cir. 1988) 6 (internal quotations and citations omitted). The court is 7 hard-pressed to comprehend how, if at all, the non-core state law 8 claims in Counts 3 and 4 could conceivably have any effect 9 whatsoever on the administration of Plaintiffs' chapter 13 case 10 inasmuch as Plaintiffs no longer have a chapter 13 case being 11 administered. Creditors in Plaintiffs' chapter 13 case have been 12 paid. Plaintiffs have completed all plan payments. Plaintiffs' 13 chapter 13 plan has run (if not over-extended) its sixty-month 14 course and the plan term can not be further extended. Plaintiffs 15 have also received a discharge, the Trustee's final account has 16 been filed and approved, and the Trustee has been relieved of all 17 duties relative to the estate.
18

19 The point here is that there is nothing more to do or that 20 can be done in Plaintiffs' chapter 13 case. There is no longer a 21 chapter 13 case or estate to administer. The court therefore 22 concludes that it lacks even "related to" jurisdiction over the 23 non-core state law claims in Counts 3 and 4 without the 24 Bankruptcy Code claims. The non-core state law claims in Counts 25 3 and 4 will therefore be dismissed without prejudice.

26 2. Discretionary Abstention Under 28 U.S.C. § 27 1334(c)(1)

28 Even if the court had "related to" jurisdiction over the non-core state law claims in Counts 3 and 4, or if jurisdiction

1 were ever found to exist, the court would nevertheless exercise
2 its discretion to abstain from adjudicating those claims under 28 3 U.S.C. § 1334(c)(1) in the absence of any claim under the 4 Bankruptcy Code. A bankruptcy court considers twelve factors 5 when determining whether to abstain under 28 U.S.C. § 1334(c)(1):

- 6 (1) the effect or lack thereof on efficient estate 7 administration if the court abstains;
- 8 (2) the extent to which state law issues predominate over bankruptcy issues;
- 9 (3) the difficulty or unsettled nature of applicable law;
- 11 (4) the presence of a related proceeding commenced in state court or other non-bankruptcy court;
- 12 (5) the jurisdictional basis, if any, other than 28
U.S.C. § 1334;
- 14 (6) the degree of relatedness or remoteness of the proceeding to the main bankruptcy case;
- 16 (7) the substance rather than form of a 'core' matter;
- 17 (8) the feasibility of severing state law claims from core bankruptcy matters to allow judgments to be entered in state court with enforcement left to the bankruptcy court;
- 19 (9) the burden on the bankruptcy court's docket;
- 20 (10) the likelihood that the commencement of the proceeding in bankruptcy court involves forum shopping by one of the parties;
- 22 (11) the existence of a right to a jury trial; and
- 23 (12) the presence of non-debtor parties.

24 Christensen v. Tucson Estates, Inc. (In re Tucson Estates, Inc.), 25 912 F.2d 1162, 1167 (9th Cir. 1990).

27 First, as noted above, that there is no longer a chapter 13 estate necessarily means that abstention can have no effect on 28 the administration of any estate.

1 Second, the non-core claims in Counts 3 and 4 are state law 2 claims.

3 Third, state law relative to the claims in Counts 3 and 4 is 4 not difficult and it is well-developed. The state court is 5 particularly adept at adjudicating those claims.

6 Fourth, absence of a pending state court proceeding is an 7 important-but not determinative-consideration. There is a 8 statement in Security Farms v. International Brotherhood of 9 Teamsters, Chauffers, Warehousemen, and Helpers, 124 F.3d 999, 10 1009-10 (9th Cir. 1997), that could be read to suggest that 11 abstention requires a pending proceeding in another forum.
12 However, Wilks v. United States (In re Wilks), 1999 WL 357919, at 13 *5 (9th Cir. BAP April 22, 1999), dispels any such notion. The 14 court therefore does not view the absence of a pending state 15 court proceeding as an impediment to abstention.
16

17 Fifth, without Bankruptcy Code claims there is no
18 jurisdictional basis over the non-core state law claims in Counts 19 3 and 4.

20 Sixth, the non-core state law claims in Counts 3 and 4 are 21 remote and not related to Plaintiffs' chapter 13 case because 22 there no longer is a chapter 13 case being administered.

23 Seventh, the state law claims in Counts 3 and 4 are all 24 non-core matters.

25 Eighth, with the dismissal of Bankruptcy Code claims there 26 are no core matters to sever non-core matters from.

27 Ninth, adjudication by this court of the non-core state law 28 claims in Counts 3 and 4 that a state court is equally capable of determining would place a burden on this court's docket in that

1 it would take judicial resources more appropriately dedicated to 2 core jurisdictional matters.

3 Tenth, the court perceives no forum shopping. Plaintiffs 4 filed in this court on the basis of Count 1.

5 Eleventh, Defendants may be entitled to a jury trial on the 6 non-core state law claims in Counts 3 and 4. Any jury trial 7 would be more efficiently handled in state court instead of by a 8 district (or by consent bankruptcy) court judge. These claims 9 also raise the specter of the need for this court to obtain 10 Defendants' consent to the entry a final judgment by a bankruptcy 11 judge.

12 Twelfth, to the extent Plaintiffs are no longer chapter 13 13 debtors the dispute is between non-debtors.

14 In short, the Tucson Estates factors favor abstention even 15 if "related to" subject matter jurisdiction over the non-core 16 state law claims in Counts 3 and 4 exists or if it is ever found 17 to exist.

19

V.
Conclusion

21 Based on the foregoing, Defendants' motion to dismiss will 22 be GRANTED. Counts 1 and 2 of the second amended complaint will 23 be DISMISSED WITH PREJUDICE. Counts 3 and 4 of the second 24 amended complaint will be DISMISSED WITHOUT PREJUDICE.
